Catalog Description

This course presents maternal-child nursing concepts as it relates to the family unit their ability to progress through Erikson's developmental stages and meet their needs as defined by Maslow. An emphasis is placed on the collaborative role of the nurse when providing for the health needs of families. Nursing concepts align with the FLCC Nursing Department's Philosophy and Organizing Framework as well as the National League for Nursing (NLN) Competencies and Outcomes. Major units of study include reproduction, antepartum, intrapartum, postpartum, neonatal transition, as well as the ethical concerns related to the maternal child population. Experiences in the college laboratory and clinical facilities support theoretical content. Note: Clinical meets for five weeks. Be prepared for lecture on campus during the time when clinical does not meet.
